

ABSTRACT

A method and the associated device for attaching at least one micromechanical chip in a housing which is optically
5 transparent to radiation of at least one predefined transmission wavelength, in which an adhesive layer is applied between the chip and the housing and the adhesive layer is irradiated through the housing using radiation of the transmission wavelength for the purpose of curing.